VOLUME NINETEEN — ST. CLOUD, OSCEOLA COUNTY, FLORIDA THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1927 — NUMBER THREE

EVERYTHING IS READY FOR SCHOOL OPENING HERE AT NINE O'CLOCK TOMORROW MORNING

AFTER REGISTRATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF PUPILS ADJOURNMENT WILL BE TAKEN AT NOON UNTIL 8:30 O'CLOCK MONDAY MORNING—HOUSE WARMING AT NEW WEST END GRAMMAR SCHOOL BUILDING 2:30 TO 4:30

School days will begin here at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow, Friday morning, with Principal H. F. eZtrouer in charge for the 1927-28 term.

All seventh and eighth grade and high school pupils will report at the high school building for registration.

And, as was printed in last week's Tribune, children living on New York and east of this avenue and all bus children coming from the eastern section of the city will report at the old grammar school building.

All children living on Massachusetts avenue and west of this avenue, and all bus children coming from the western section of the city, will report at the new West End Grammar School building.

All kindergarten children will report direct to Miss Gardner in the old primary building, used last year by the first grade.

All high school, seventh and eighth grade, books and these not on the free list this year will be purchased at the high school building. No pencils or paper will be sold there. Such articles must be bought at the down-town stores, according to the principal.

Beginning next Monday, when the regular session goes into full action, school will open at 8:30. Hot lunches will be served at noon.

The opening tomorrow will be for registration and assignment purposes only, save, probably the arrangement for other minor details having to do with gains made by students during the past summer, and adjournment will be taken at noon until Monday.

Tomorrow morning's formalities, however, will be overshadowed in the afternoon by a student-parent-teachers' gathering at the new West End Grammar School building, where a general "housewarming" will begin at 2:30 o'clock and last until 4:30.

At this meeting the patrons and the teachers will meet and mingle and exchange thoughts and courtesies for the best interests of every one concerned in St. Cloud's splendid and outstanding schooling system.

What very few people realize, it is a fact that St. Cloud enjoys probably the longest—at the least as long— a term of public school of any other city in Florida, or of the entire country for that matter—nine months. As a concrete example, the press only recently carried reports that Jacksonville had reduced its school term to seven months, and many other cities already have agreed upon similar curtailments.

The family and staff for the St. Cloud schools necessarily had to be increased this year, due to the increased number of pupils, the remarkably commodious and needed increase in housing space and the purpose of the patrons and school officials to give to their children the best opportunity possible for acquiring the proper training.

Due to the inability of the Tribune to secure photographs of the teachers sufficiently in advance of publication to permit the engraves to make cuts, only a few, such as could be obtained, appear in today's issue. However, it is our hope to print all the others from time to time.

Hollis Recovering

J. C. Hollis, Jr., athletic coach for the St. Cloud schools, who was reported to have undergone an operation for appendicitis recently, is rapidly recovering and he is expected to report for duty here next week.

UNCLE JOSH BUYS HIS FIRST CAR—A BIG BUICK

Uncle Josh Ferguson has purchased a new 1928 Master Six Buick Brougham.

This is the first car Uncle Josh has ever owned, according to his own statement, and he claims it is just like driving one of these fine Kentucky horses, for all he has to do, he says, "is hold it in the road and she surely goes against the bit."

While his wife was visiting in Kentucky Mr. Ferguson planned the purchase of a car as a sort of surprise for Mrs. Ferguson.

REPUBLICANS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS FOR 1928 CAMPAIGN

ST. CLOUD CONVENTION CALLS FOR BURYING OF PREJUDICE AND FOR UNITED ACTION

The Tribune, being a Democratic newspaper, does not subscribe to the denunciation of the party as contained in the following story; but it is news, and should serve to quicken Democrats to more concerted action than has been noted over the past few years.—The Editor.

Osceola county Republicans held their delegate convention here last Thursday, September 1, for the purpose of reorganizing in this county and announcing the principles for which the party stands in the state.

Delegates from various sections of Florida were in attendance, the principal addresses being delivered by Hon. Howard Gibbons, of Miami, chairman of the fourth congressional committee, and Fred E. Britton, treasurer of the state committee.

The need for bipartisan government in Florida was stressed by the leading speakers, who made a further plea for the casting aside of prejudices and the adoption of policies along lines similar to good business organization, rendering helpful service to all the people, together with a cordial invitation to join the ranks of the Republican party.

As a result of the deliberations, the following resolution was drafted and adopted:

1. Resolved, that the Osceola county Republican convention assembled in St. Cloud, September 1st, 1927 and composed of delegates elected by the election districts of the county, hereby declare its affiliation with and support of the National Republican committee and State Committee of Republican Party of Florida and unqualifiedly endorses the platform and policy of both, including the policy adopted by the Republican State convention at St. Petersburg on April 5th, 1927, which declares for the "middle-of-the-road" plan with no fusions or deals with any other political organizations, and for the building of the Republican party in this state from election districts up by the action and under the control of the Republican voters.

2. Resolved, that recognizing the present moment as strategic, fraught with the greatest opportunity the Republican party ever had or will have to win Republican victory in Florida, and it is a clarion call to all Republicans to forget factional differences and to present a united front, we invite all voters, without regard to past party affiliations or factional antagonisms, to unite in this common movement and co-operate with this organization, created and controlled by the Republican voters, and to support our state and national committees in a supreme effort to carry Florida for the Republican party in 1928.

3. Resolved, that we recognize the crying need for protection of Florida

RED CROSS ANNUAL MEET

The local Red Cross Chapter will hold its annual meeting for the election of officers Thursday evening, October 6, at 7:45 o'clock, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce on Tenth street.

Due to the pressure of other business that I shall be engaged in, it will be necessary that the chapter elect a new chairman and officers on that date.

HELEN ELLIS, Chairman.

A SLOGAN CONTEST IS STARTED BY C. OF C.

As a stimulous to the spirit of St. Cloud, G. C. Hunter, who had previously offered $10.00 for the best slogan, to be erected at the approaches to the city, was named chairman of the Slogan Committee at Wednesday Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The slogan is to consist of not more than seven words, and decision as to the best one submitted will be rendered by Mr. Hunter, chairman, and his fellow-committemen, W. D. Eiselstein and William Landiss. All replies must be mailed not later than midnight, September 24, to slogan committee, care G. C. Hunter, St. Cloud, Florida.

The contest is open to any boy or girl, man or woman residing in St. Cloud, or within a radius of five miles from the city.

The first prize will be $10.00 and a year's membership in the chamber of commerce, and the one winning the award will have his or her slogan adopted. The next two best slogans, which will be published in the St. Cloud Tribune, will carry a year's membership each in the chamber.

In order to make it possible to secure the very best slogan our talent can produce, the committee reserved the right to reject all slogans and reopen the contest, if a suitable one is not chosen from the present contest.

COAST LINE BEGIN BEAUTIFYING R. R. BLOCK

The Atlantic Coast Line has begun beautifying its property between New York and Pennsylvania avenues, on the south side of its tracks, according to local agent, W. R. Livingston.

The platform will be extended to the middle of the block, going east, and the remaining half-block will be planted flowers and enclosed in a fence consisting of concrete posts, protected by proper connecting chains.

Roadmaster Chandler, of Kissimmee, is expected to bring over his crew in a few days to layout the flower beds and to place marl rock on the drive way, south of the depot.

A crew of men is unloading the marl between the tracks today.

ODD FELLOWS PICNIC ENJOYED BY LARGE GATHERING

Thursday afternoon of last week members of the St. Cloud and Kissimmee lodges of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs enjoyed a delightful picnic on the shore of East Tohopekaliga, two miles east of the city. There were a number of guests from other cities to partake of the bountiful picnic dinner, which was served from the well filled baskets of the members who had planned the affair, with a big fry on the side, which came through the generosity of County Game Warden Ira Keen and his assistant Ernest Oliver, of Kissimmee. Limes and lemons were donated by G. H. White, of Runnymede.

Shortly after noon the crowd began to gather, when J. C. Dibble of the Kissimmee lodge started dishing out cold lemonade, and a short while afterward hot fried fish was ready and all during the afternoon fish coffee and lemonade was enjoyed by the folks as they gathered for the final big picnic dinner at five-thirty o'clock. Everything imaginable that is good to eat was brought by the picnickers and spread on a long table ready for the feast.

After the evening dinner speeches were made by Rev. M. J. Johnson, pastor of the Christian church at Kissimmee, and Dr. Ivor G. Hyndman, pastor of the St. Cloud Methodist church. Both speeches were well received, especially that of Dr. Hyndman, who having been a member of the Odd Fellows for many years, gave much of the history of the order.

Everyone went home about dark expressing themselves as having had a very pleasant picnic and an exceptionally fine dinner.

INTEREST AROUSED BY HUNTER TALK AT C. OF C.

Wednesday's meeting of the chamber of commerce evolved into quite a rally for a bigger and more effective organization when G. C. Hunter, well-known hotel developer and banker, took the floor "for the better of the order."

Mr. Hunter had only recently returned from a business trip to many northern, eastern and western points, where he had gone very thoroughly into economic conditions. He had seen nothing to alarm him, and, in fact, said that the cheap money of the east indicated that there was nothing of an unusual character to prevent the return of normal times at such a future day as the business men of Florida would turn from pessimism to action.

He was outspoken in his opinion against dissension in any channel of business, civic or municipal life and declared in effect that there was no reason for lagging behind here or anywhere else in Florida, if we stand shoulder to shoulder for the things that command a return of prosperous times.

He cited a recent interview with W. W. Rose, of Orlando, chairman of the Florida Real Estate Commission, in which Mr. Rose declared that our worst enemy was within—the local pessimist. Chairman Rose had just returned from a tour through the the United States and Canada, during which time he attended the annual convention of the National Real Estate Boards at Seattle.

While in Seattle and in all the other pivotal points of the continent, from a stand point of financial strength, Mr. Rose declared he found the people full of praise for Florida and its spirit of progress, but, on the other hand, the pessimist at home was back-firing.

Mr. Hunter read from the interview, which appeared in the Orlando Sentinel, and emphasized the truth of Mr. Rose's views, as well as confirming it by citing conditions as he himself had witnessed them on his recent extensive journey.

He pointed to St. Cloud as an example of what had been accomplished within the past two years—in the many splendid buildings now gracing where two years ago vacant lots, yielding no return to their owners and small taxes to the community be shabby structures were all one had to witness as an inspiration to step and stay in the city. This alone, he explained, was a guarantee of growth, even if the building program all over the country had been caught up with.

As everyone knows, business conditions run in cycles, and the collapse of the so-called boom here left us in the best shape the state has ever been in its history. We have the advantage over others, in that a steady business is always to be expected from our winter tourists and now we have ample housing room to offer them, at rates that will keep them here longer and induce them to remain with us permanently or return earlier next year.

In short, there is nothing the matter with Florida, and the only trouble within is the pessimist.

Buck up, look up and pull together and we will find ourselves in a far better technical position at this time than we have ever enjoyed before; and business channels will begin stirring and flowing in the right direction—thus was the sense of Mr. Hunter's talk.

And, to show his interest in a united chamber of commerce, for the purpose of uniting all civic, business and municipal activities, Mr. Hunter offered $10.00 as first prize for a slogan to be posted at the gateways of St. Cloud. He said he had conceived the thought while passing through Leesburg the other day—when he was attracted by a large sign at the entrance to the city—"The City Without A Slump."

The story of a prize contest for a chamber of commerce slogan appears in another column of this issue of the Tribune.

ORGANIZATION OF BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB COMPLETED LAST NIGHT WITH ELECTION

HOLMES CRAWFORD, PRESIDENT; J. L. PAXSON, VICE PRESIDENT; C. PORTER, SECRETARY AND I. E. DIEFENDORF, TREASURER, COMPLETE OFFICERS OF CLUB—"CLOSER CO-OPERATION AMONG THE BUSINESS MEN OF ST. CLOUD" IS CLUB'S OBJECT

With the election of permanent officers last night the organization of the St. Cloud Business Men's Club was completed. Two previous meetings had been held looking to the organization of a body of business men for the purpose of bringing about closer co-operation among the business interests of the city, and to assist in all worthy causes for the up-building of St. Cloud and Osceola County. The membership is limited to men in business in the city, and all matters must be decided by the members present at any meeting, there being no boards of governors or directors to handle any business.

Holmes Crawford, of the Crawford Electric Co., was made permanent president, he having been chosen temporary chairman at the first meeting; J. L. Paxson, grocer of Eighth street near city park, was chosen vice-president; C. Porter, of the Florida Flour and Feed Co., secretary; I. E. Diefendorf, manager of the Western Union, treasurer.

Hunter Urged Support of Chamber of Commerce

The first speaker was Mr. G. C. Hunter, who had been invited to address the meeting, and he urged strongly that every member of the Business Men's Club become a member of the Chamber of Commerce, if not already members, as he was of the opinion that the Chamber of Commerce was the most important organization in the city, and that it deserved the undivided support of every business man. He went into many details of business conditions generally, and made some fine suggestions to the club.

When Mr. Hunter closed his talk, H. A. Haymaker invited him to become a member of the club, and Mr. Hunter replied that he would do so when he saw the club members backing the Chamber of Commerce.

John Bailey was of the opinion that the Chamber of Commerce might endorse the Business Men's club as an auxiliary and that the two could work together for a greater St. Cloud. T. G. Moore stated that he believed if the club voted on the question of joining the chamber of commerce at this time the result would be in the negative. This Mr. Moore learned was a wrong opinion when later in the meeting it was found that a big majority of those present were members of the chamber of commerce already.

R. L. Sisson, who was also an invited guest, opposed membership in the chamber of commerce under present conditions, but stated that he was willing to do his share, if conditions were changed. He endorsed Mr. Moore's remarks in the matter.

G. G. Wheat urged every member to join the chamber of commerce and to keep the social meetings and luncheons going for those who are not active business men and for the tourists stating that night business sessions could be held by the business men only and matters of importance handled by them in co-operation with the chamber of commerce.

I. E. Diefendorf stated that he was under the impression when he joined the club that co-operation with the chamber of commerce was to be the main work of the club, else he would not have joined. Gus Rublen made the same statement. Both were willing to continue in the club and help the chamber of commerce when reorganized.

Commissioner Colvin Parker expressed his desire of co-operation but thought the real business of boosting the city should be looked after at a meeting of the business men only, separate from the social gatherings of the chamber of commerce.

Rev. L. M. Parker, former president of the chamber of commerce, related how hard he had worked to get the chamber of commerce on its feet some years ago when it was organized, but stated he had been out two years because of the manner in which business was now conducted. He was willing to get behind the organization again if conditions changed. He also wanted to support the business men's club as a real working organization in developing the city.

John Bailey and Gus Rublen and many others made remarks along similar lines.

Jack Hewitt and G. G. Wheat urged all members of the club to continue

CITY ASSESSMENT COMPLETED BY COMMISSION

As a stimulus to the spirit of session held Tuesday afternoon the city officials completed their checking of the city assessment roll which had been turned over by Messrs King & Phillips, who were employed to make the assessment of all property for this year. The final checking was on the valuations of automobiles owned and operated about the city. The books are now ready to be copied into the tax collectors records, which work will be done before November 1, when taxes are due.

Approximately $250,000 was added to the assessment roll this year in new buildings completed before January 1, the date on which the assessment is based for the current year.

The city commission accepted an offer of G. C. Hunter to sell the city a strip of land adjoining the baseball park on the west side, the price agreed on to be deducted from amounts due by Mr. Hunter to the city.

Contractor Whitmer was present at the meeting discussing matters in connection with recent street and sewer contracts. Adjournment was taken at five o'clock until 10:00 a. m. Wednesday, but two of the city commissioners Messrs Outlaw and Parker, were called out of town Wednesday morning and no meeting was held yesterday.

MARKED PROGRESS BEING MADE ON NEW YORK AVE

As an instance of the speed with which work is executed in St. Cloud, it was learned yesterday that the brick has already arrived for use in extending New York avenue between Tenth and Eleventh streets.

The work of clearing away the sidewalks and setting back obstructions otherwise for this purpose has also been carried forward with speed and little or no inconvenience to traffic.

WHITEWAY SYSTEM IS NOW BEING INSTALLED

Work of extending the whiteway system of the city on Massachusetts, Florida, Indiana and Pennsylvania avenues from East Lake to the end of the pavement on the north is under way. Connections at the power plant are being arranged at this time, and wire with which to erect the lines to carry the current will be on hand as soon as the base transformers have been finished.

It will require a separate current and consequently a separate wire for each street, so that the "juice" required for the street lighting will not pass over the same line that supplies current to the homes on the avenues. Likewise, individual wires will be stretched from the power house to junction boxes to be provided for the whiteway system.

WANTED!

Real estate brokers or individuals who wish to sell property could use these columns to great advantages.

People are now here quietly looking up boys and northerners are watching the papers for homes—to rent or buy.

IF YOU DON'T ADVERTISE YOU CAN'T EXPECT TO SELL.

"Out there in a box. He's dead," answered the colored man.

"Well, if he is dead, you don't want a return ticket for him."

"Yes, suh," said the colored man: "you see, we sta't goin' to bury him in Sha'leston; but we have about forty kin folks down there, and we figured it would be cheaper to carry him down to Sha'leston fo' de funer'l service and bring him back than to bring the whole family up here."—America's Honor.

WHY FISH IS FISH!

The Publisher of the Queen County, N. Y., Chronicle, tells the prize fish story of the summer, although he has not been fishing at all, but staying home and refusing to accept the idea of "dull summer months." A few clippings from the front page of the paper show how this publisher combats the tendency on the part of some merchants to slow down on their advertising during that period. One of these was an article in a two-column box which said:

Are You So Foolish?

"Why your lockox is full of fish! Where are you going with all those nets and lines?"

"I am going fishing. I always go fishing when we have plenty of fish in the house."

"But last week when you did not have any fish in the house you would not go fishing."

"That's right I never go fishing when we have no fish in the house."

Democrats of Osceola

Now that the important primaries of 1928 are drawing near, it is only common sense and good business that the Democratic Executive Committee of Osceola County wake up and get together for the protection of a solid county ticket and a definite announcement to the public as to what the party will stand for in its forthcoming campaign. It is certain that the Democratic candidates are not going to ride to office on an undisturbed and rising tide in 1928, for the Republicans are already busy down here.

The Republicans, it is true, are not only in the minority in Florida, as well as Osceola County, but they are apparently hopelessly split at this time. Nevertheless, the ammunition they have mustered out for the fight and the adroitness with which the leaders of the stronger wing in this party have trained their guns to capture the white vote in Osceola County cannot go unchallenged by the Democratic organization here.

Our leaders must don their accoutrement and call their followers into action. It is time to act—Now.

The Silver Spoon

Hardly a day passes that fails to bring another report of some one in our community having achieved distinction in the world of higher arts.

While many of the old timers know it, Moses Folsom, noted paragrapher of facts, reminded us in his columns received and published in today's issue of this paper that

"Harry C. Witwer, the well-known American story writer, worked some years ago in the office of the St. Cloud Tribune, and in the offices of other newspapers in Florida."

Correct, and among other men who have achieved distinction as writers in later years is our esteemed friend and correspondent Moses Folsom—who once worked on the St. Cloud Tribune.

It is a fact that a notable number of our great writers are men and women who came from modest home environment and small cities or towns or the farm. The silver spoon tarnishes quicker in the mouth of the city chap who is raised with servants and every other comfort at his elbow than it does in the hands of a farmer boy who knows that it must be kept in use to be kept clean.

Tariff Promotes Growth of Sugar Industry

A weekly trade circular on sugar published by Czarnikow Rionda Company of New York, contains some instructive figures on the relation between protective tariffs and the increase in sugar production in various countries. The point brought out is that almost the only countries that have increased their production during the past two years are those that maintain a substantial protective tariff.

Russia, with a tariff of 4.20 cents a pound, has increased sugar production from 458,000 tons in 1925 to 1,000,000 tons in 1927; Poland, with 2.18 cents tariff, has increased production 20 per cent; Spain shows an increase of 15 per cent with 7.44 cents tariff; England, with 5 cents a pound tariff, has increased sugar output nearly seven times, from 23,750 tons in 1925 to 155,500 tons this year.

On the other hand, low duty countries, with few exceptions, show a decline in sugar production. Among these is the United States. Our tariff of 1.76 cents a pound is allowing foreign sugar to come into the American market in larger proportions than at any time since the present tariff was established.

In 1922 it cost 2.67 cents a pound more to produce beet sugar in the United States than to produce refined cane sugar in Cuba. Even after paying the import duty, the Cubans had an advantage of nine-tenths of a cent a pound in the American market. The proportion is about the same now.

A protective tariff is one that places producers within the country at an advantage over foreign competitor in their home market and not one that reduces their disadvantage to 50 or 25 per cent of what it would be with no tariff at all. Judged by this standard, the present import duty of the United States is far from qualifying as a protection rate. To reach that position it would have to be raised above two cents a pound.

The Passive Are Aroused

Following the assassination of Governor Stuenberg and the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times some 18 years ago, this country first became generally alarmed against what was then termed socialism, but what later developed into nothing more or less than plain anarchy, brazenly wrapped in a red rag, soaked with crimson human hatred—fostered by a contemptuous and treacherous set of low-bred foreigners, with nothing but the destruction of sound government and organized business in view.

The heralds of the Red are not nearly so ignorant as many once believed them to be, and because of a feeling that their operations would eventually crumble before the high court of public sentiment, the passive citizen, the most powerful element on earth when finally aroused, paid little or no attention to the spreading of the doctrine.

Even after Bolshevism swallowed Russia only yesterday so to speak it was not enough to bring millions to a realization that some day the depredations of this class might be enacted at their own doors and the movement received but secondary consideration, except, it must be said in all fairness, by the far-sighted secret service of the more intelligent nations.

But, now the time is come. Action is to be taken. It must be. The Passive World is aroused! The Red flag is going, with its cohorts and pernicious leaders hauling it away in its own disgraced easion instead of flaunting it in our faces any longer.

The Radical like the old time bar room keeper has cut his own throat. He is a suicide. His climax was reached when the effect of the Sacco-Vanzetti propaganda back-fired against the world.

Hence the red, in his desperate extravaganzas, has proved to be his own greatest foe.

It must be certain that laws are now being drafted in the sanctuaries of many lawmakers, with teeth so long and tight that this abominable type of destructionists can no longer use American freedom as a sort of loop-the-loop against American institutions.

Let us hope that the time is in sight when the man or woman who applies for entrance to the United States will have to show intentions of supporting American principles far beyond the mere affirmative, in an empty voice, so often uttered.

But what with the ones here? If their conduct belies their pledge, send them back. Those now in this country who have violated their allegiance to the country are due less consideration than a thief plying in the night, and they should be the first to have to walk the plank.

Positive At Last

The prosecuting attorney was having a difficult time with the star witness for the defense. His answers were evasive and not to the point. The judge finally cautioned him to give more precise answers. "We don't want your opinion of this case, just answer questions put to you, that's all."

"You say you drive a wagon?" asked the prosecutor.

"No, sir, I do not, came the positive answer.

But didn't you tell me just a moment ago that you did?"

"No sir, I did not."

"Gracious! I put it to you on your oath. Do you drive a wagon?"

"No, sir."

"Then what is your occupation?"

"I drive a horse!"

SEEKING CONVENTION

Miami business men, working in earnest to try and entice the Democratic national convention next June, have offered to match any other city in cash outlay and climate. But they do more. They have definitely announced that Florida will put forth no favorite son for the presidential nomination. "I don't think Miami will get the convention," said a Tampa Democrat yesterday, "but I am rejoiced to see the nerve and spirit of its people in going after it. And why not? The assurance that no favorite son will be put up to be shot at is the best thing about the offer. This sort of stuff is tiresome. We hear too much about a man of small parts being mentioned. And fortunately Florida has no candidate."—Tampa Tribune.

Becoming Obsolete — By Henry Mahoin

Cartoonist Muhoin hit upon a particularly timely idea as he sat himself down to his drawing board for his weekly contribution to the readers of The Tribune. This is the season of the year when mail order houses and cheap-John selling-by-agent houses make a particular heavy drive after the dollars of the "hick" trade—as they call it. They know that money is more plentiful in the smaller towns and rural districts during the Fall months when crops are being marketed—and they are out to "get theirs" by every method known in "high pressure" selling. But their methods are fast becoming obsolete. Thoughtful citizens in all territories now know that home industries must be patronized if their community is to prosper. And, they have learned that better merchandise at lower prices can be obtained in home stores; to be selected and purchased at leisure; and always with the option of exchange and adjustment when not competely satisfied.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

There Is a Lawbreaker Within You

The great lawbreaker is greed.

Of course men break laws because of other passions, such as love, revenge, vanity and the like.

But greed breaks the law twenty times to where any other feeling breaks it once.

The mainspring of every burglar's and pickpocket's career is greed. They want "dough" and they want it quick. Hence the blackjack and the breaking and entering.

Old people are waited for with impatience and not waited on with love, because of greed.

Many an unhappy marriage has its cause in greed.

Families are separated on account of it and ancient grudges were founded.

Laws are passed at its instigation.

The passage of a passport law and of an income tax law had no foundations in justice, but took place simply because there were occasions of graft. The money could have been raised in a much better way by simple processes of justice.

Greed was equally behind the activities of Robin Hood of yore and the modern legislator. The principle upon which they acted is the same. They took money from those who had it as an excuse that they were protecting those who had it not.

The gist of all opposition to the prohibition law is greed. Bootleggers do not exist so much because people have an inborn appetite for liquor as because of the immense profits there are in the clandestine business.

A barber was recently arrested in New York for shaving a man on Sunday. He could not resist the temptation to make fifteen cents, notwithstanding it involved the violation of the law.

All laws will be broken to an extent where there is an attempt to run counter to an acquisitory instinct of the individual.

We have laws against theft, arson, murder and the like, and have had them for so, these thousands of years. But they are all as steadily broken as the law against alcoholic liquors.

Wherever you find a preponderance of greed, you find lawbreaking. Greed is the chiefest of our anti-social vices, and ranks first as our lawbreaker.

When Hubby Goes Out At Night

Dear Miss Flo:—

I am a married woman with two children, aged ten and twelve. My husband insists that he loves me—yet he refuses to take me out places in the evenings. When he goes, he goes alone. Now I like going out with my husband and children, but he tells me if I want to go to take the children and go on. Do you think I should do as he says—take the children and go on. Of course, that leaves him free to do whatever he wishes. Do you think I should do as he says—take the children and go, or stay at home and brood over his absence until he returns. I don't know where he goes, because he only tosses me or gets angry when I ask him. Naturally, it make me jealous and I don't like to have him go out without me.

E. P.

Certainly a wife knows no greater torture than that of sitting at home nights, wondering where her absent husband is, while in her imagination he pictures her fast, bald-headed, prosaic, middle-aged spouse in scenes of wild revelry, in which wine and vamps in slinky clothes and long jade earrings play a large part. And it does not alleviate her misery in the least that these wild orgies are generally purely imaginary, conceived in the madness of her jealousy. Nine times out of ten hubby has spent the evening in a harmless card game around the corner, or has been with a group of cronies in the back of a drug store laying down the law about the country in general.

It would save wives a great deal of unnecessary misery if they would only realize that vice is an expensive luxury for which most men lack the price. The average husband cannot get very gay on what is left of his salary after he has paid the butcher, the baker, the grocer, and settled for the children's shoes and paid the doctor bills. When he wanders away from his fireside of an evening it is generally for no such wickedness as his wife imagines, but for a mild game of pool or a gossip with other men, and the only lurid night life he sees is on the moving-picture screen.

It is exaggerated egoism on the part of any one individual to believe that he or she can supply another individual's whole need of human companionship. It is its own undoing, for it strikes a deadly blow at personal liberty—the thing that is dearer to us and more necessary to our happiness than any one individual ever is.

If husbands and wives want to deliberately kill every particle of affection that their mates have for them, they could take no better way to do it than by cutting off all semblance of freedom.

The point at issue, however, is whether the wife should go and amuse herself or stay at home and weep, and as long as she can take the children with her I am all for her going.

Of course, the more considerate thing would be for your husband to go with you—occasionally at least—but there is no merit in being unnecessarily miserable, and there is sound philosophy in making the best of a bad bargain. If your husband doesn't enjoy family parties, let him go by his lonesome, and find something to do in his absence.

It will make for domestic peace and harmony if you are able to meet him on his return with an account of the pleasant time you have had instead of with surging thoughts you have had in his absence and the things about his conduct that you have bottled up to tell him.

SOLOMON DEDICATES THE TEMPLE

Lesson Text—1 Kings 8

It was eleven months after the completion of the magnificent Temple, reared under the oversight of King Solomon, that the great formal dedication of which we read in today's chapter took place. During that time, much thought had been put into the matter of making this one of the most intensely solemn and instructive occasions the nation had ever had.

Seven days were occupied by the dedication festival late in October, leading up to the great feast of tabernacles (2 Chron. 7:8-10). There must have been an immense multitude present as the result of the King's widespread invitations. The offering of sacrifices preceded and closed the transaction.

The chapter divides into three sections: Act I—The solemn removal of the ark and other furniture of the old sanctuary into the new temple (vs. 1-21). Act II—Solomon's introductory address and noble prayer (vs. 22-61). Act III.—The offering of the sacrifice (vs. 62-66).

Who can read the detailed accounts here and in Chronicles and not feel that this was a service in the highest degree impressive and sublime? Every word seems perfectly adapted to the grand occasion.

Remember that David had already organized the priesthood and Levites 38,000 of the tribe having been assigned to their particular work. Common duties fell to 24,000; 6,000 were to be officers; 4,000 were to be guards and porters, and 4,000 made up a great choir and orchestra. We are told that 120 of the latter were trumpeters, while others had cymbals, harps and psalteries.

Picture the scene—around the great bronze altar in the vast court before the Temple doors, the sacrificers, surrounded by this magnificent choir arrayed in white linen! Solomon himself took his place on a raised platform, and there, crowded in the spacious court beyond, were the thousands upon thousands of the Israelites. Where could we look today for a religious event of such profound interest?

It was fitting that the ceremonies should begin with the burnt offerings, typical of Him who on Calvary's Cross should later offer Himself in perfect devotion to the Father's will. Then there was the bringing in of the ark of the covenant, which was the formal recognition of God in His new and appropriate dwelling place.

As the ark, borne by Levites, advanced through the open portals of the temple, it may be that the 24th Psalm was sung by the choir. We may well imagine, also, the joining of all those voices and instruments in the chanting of such Psalms as the 47th, 97th, 98th and 107th.

Into the holy place (oracle—v. 6) the priests bore the ark, depositing it beneath the wings of the cherubim, the place of rest. "They drew out the staves" (v. 8), a sign that it was no more to go out. These were the long handles by which the ark had been borne to and fro in the many journeys of the Israelites.

All that was in the ark were the tables of stone (v. 9). Here we see for the last time these venerable fragments of the rock of Sinai. They disappeared, as did the ark, when Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem. The covenant which these stones recorded, was, according to Jeremiah (31:32-33), only to be superceded by the law written on the heart. The great moral principles of these commandments could not be lost, and by the Spirit of God they are to this day embedded in the hearts of all true believers under Grace.

Complete and beautiful stood the Temple. Priests and King had performed their parts. In its place within the veil, the ark rested, with the sacred law within and the cherubim's outspreading wings above. Priests and people, in unison with many instruments, had lifted up their voices in praise and thanksgiving to God. It only remained for God to give some token that He accepted His house.

"And it came to pass when the priests were come out of the holy place that the cloud filled the house of the Lord . . . . . for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord" (v. 11).

What a thrill must have gone through every heart as the shekinah cloud was seen descending and then entering the Temple! As it rested over the ark, the priests saw it brighten into such a concentrated glow that they were forced to retire.

This, since the days of the Tabernacle, had been the symbol of God's manifest, personal presence. In the days of wilderness journeyings, the pillar of cloud and fire had given the Israelites assurance by day and night that God Himself was with them. This visible token again assured the people that God had accepted and consecrated the Temple.

What means all this to us? John tells us (John 12:41) that Isaiah in his references to this same glory of the Lord (4ch. 6) had in mind our Lord Jesus Christ. Thus he distinctly affirms that Christ is the Jehovah of the Israelites, the manifest Glory of God.

What light does this throw upon the transcendent spectacles of the transfiguration on the mount, and the ascension, where our Lord was manifested in the midst of inscrutible light? The New Testament is filled with the glory of God in Jesus Christ, and closes with the vision of the Son of man, the Lamb that was slain, as the center and source of all divine glory, dominion and blessedness.

Was God enthroned upon the mercy seat, dwelling among his people? He came later and dwelt among His people in the person of His glorious Son. "We beheld His glory," says John, "the glory as of the only begotten of the Father." The church that gives Him His Scriptural place, never lacks for tokens of the divine presence. If a church is cold, formal and dead, it is because it has pushed Christ outside. The glory of the house has departed.

All the outward glory of the old dispensation is nothing in comparison with the glory of this dispensation of Grace. "For if that which is done away was glorious," wrote Paul, "much more that which remaineth is glorious" (2 Cor. 3:11). We need not seek now the Temple of Jerusalem to find His glory, for in Christ, all who from the heart believe, may have the Spirit dwelling within, wherever they may be, and by the Spirit may be changed into His image "from glory to glory" (2 Cor. 3:18).

The chapter proceeds with the account of Solomon's fitting words of dedication and his prayer of unexampled sublimity, which should be carefully read. This prayer begins with adoration and is saturated with these other essential elements of Spirit-taught prayer—meditation, thanksgiving, petition, intercession, confession and pleading for the promises. Study this prayer and mark these different elements.

The character of the dedication brings before us the main purpose, not only of the Temple, but of the church of today, which has succeeded to its place. It is its internal use that counts, not its external costliness. The church is to be essentially a house of prayer, for the worship and praise of God, who has made Himself known to us through Jesus Christ.

As the Temple was then the resting place of the ark, so the church today must be the sacred depository of God's word, or utterly fail of its mission. They who would grow in grace and in the knowledge of Him, must love the habitation of God's house. Those are indeed to be pitied who cannot find a church where the pure gospel is preached and where God's presence is manifest.

FITH AND POINT

Many a church that has all the paraphernalia, has never brought up the ark (v. 4).

All cost and pains are lost on stately structures unless God owns them in His presence.

It is a great thing when a nation's ruler can lead in prayer (v. 22).

The divine presence benefifies the church more than the gold of its decorations of the softness of its stained windows.

Men may dedicate, but God alone can consecrated.

Unless the divine Word finds its home in the holiest place of the church the church is little more than a second-rate club house.

The ruler who ignores religious principle, has ignored the mightiest force for good in a nation.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

Who is the great Antitype of the Temple? (Jn. 1:14; 2:19-21; Matt. 12:6)

What other New Testament antitype do we have for the temple? (Eph. 2:20-22).

Where was the first appearance of the glory cloud? (V. 10; cp. Ex. 13:20,22).

What had happened to the tabernacle when it was finished according to God's Word? (Ex. 40:34-35).

What abiding and surpassing privilege does every New Testament believer have? (2 Cor. 3:18; 4:6; Jn. 1:14).

What visible and transcending manifestation of glory will be the next in God's order? (Rev. 21:11, 23, 24).

Was Solomon's prayer on the ground of the sacrificial blood? (V. 22; cp. Heb. 9:22; 10:19-20).

What is the recorded prayer in the Bible?

GOLDEN TEXT ILLUSTRATION

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord" Psa. 122:1).

Some time ago "The Sunday School Times" told how one day a serious fire broke out in Moody Church in Chicago. A student in the Bible Institute building nearby attempted to awaken her room-mate. "Get up," she said, "the Moody Church is on fire!" The drowsy student only replied: "That's nothing; it's always on fire." That is a great testimony for a church, and it is to the services of such a church that God's child always looks forward. Can we say of a church from which God's presence had apparently departed—"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord"?

VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

A feature of the Veterans Association on last Saturday was an address by former Mayor, but now a commissioner, Outlaw.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Comrade Lathrop, by singing three verses of "America." Prayer was then offered by Comrade Cooley, the vice-chaplain. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which came the Florida song and St. Cloud yell and a collection was taken.

It was announced by Mr. Stauffer that after this month and beginning on October 1, the Veterans' meeting will begin at one o'clock instead of two, as at present. Please remember the change.

The social hour was turned over to Comrade Perkins, who gave the following program:

Song, by Mrs. Oman and daughter Bernice, "The Model Church," for encore, "Don't Forget the Old Folks."

Comrade Perkins gave a short talk on the United North and South.

Reading by Mrs. Perkins, "The Blue and the Gray."

Ex-Mayor Outlaw then gave a spirited talk on the management of St. Cloud; how the taxes are used and what the growth of the city could be with a united city commission and people. He received much applause. Following this was:

Song by Miss Ringsmuth, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought;" for encore a reading, "Christ Calls Their Need." Miss Ringsmuth is preparing herself for evangelical work.

The vaudeville given by four young men was very good, and this closed the program. The meeting was closed by singing two verses of the national anthem.

The social hour of the next meeting will be in charge of the W. R. C., with Mrs. Penn as leader.

Josephine Perkins, Secretary.

D. OF V. GATHERING

The following clipping from the Steuben county, Bath, N. Y., COURIER, will interest many citizens of St. Cloud.

"Susan B. Anthony Tent, D. of V., of the U. W., held their annual picnic with Comrade John R. Bennett, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. G. Mott, on Wednesday, August 3rd, and had for their guests the veterans, their wives, and the families of the daughters. Mrs. Slater, a member of Tent No. 1, of St. Cloud, Florida, was also a guest. A beautiful supper was served to over fifty. The program included a reading by Mrs. Mary Johnson, "Who Will Tell the Story When the Boys in Blue Are Gone?" A response, by Mrs. Alice Lewis, "The Daughters Will Tell the Story When the Boys in Blue Are Gone." There were remarks by different veterans, and Mrs. Slater gave a very interesting talk on St. Cloud. At parting we all hoped to meet with Comrade Bennett another year.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION ADVISED CONCERNING TEACHERS' MODES

MAY BOB THEIR HAIR, WEAR SILK STOCKINGS, SHORT SKIRTS AND ATTEND DANCES AS MUCH AS THEY PLEASE, SAYS ATTORNEY GENERAL DAVIS

TALLAHARSEE, Fla.—In effect, the lady school teachers of Florida may bob their hair, wear silk stockings, shorten their skirts and attend dances as much as they please without running afoul of rules and regulations prescribed by the state authorities, according to Attorney General Fred H. Davis, who so expressed himself recently to State Superintendent of Instruction, W. S. Cawthon, when the latter sought the advice of the State's Chief legal adviser.

Mr. Cawthon requested the attorney general's opinion in the matter when a letter reached him from a school trustee of Holmes county complaining that contracts for teacher employment in that county contained a clause against attending dances or participating in them.

The state superintendent of education, the attorney general said, has the power to make rules and regulation governing the conduct of teachers and it is the duty of the state board of education to co-operate with him in enforcing them. County superintendents and county boards, he added, have no right to prescribe rules and regulation in conflict with those of the state authorities.

"In the interests of wisdom and common sense, the form of contract prescribed by the state board of education omits any reference to whether the teacher shall bob her hair, wear silk stockings, shorten her skirts, attend dances, etc.," Mr. Davis stated.

MICHIGAN ASSOCIATION

About thirty of the Michigan people met at the home of James Goff, on Wednesday, August 31st, for a picnic and after doing justice to a bountiful dinner which was served out doors under the beautiful Oaks, we were called together for a short program, with the vice-president, Mr. Abbott, in the chair.

The names of Mr. and Mrs. Goff were added to the committee on resolutions. The next picnic will be held at the home of James Ballard, the first Wednesday in October.

Mr. Barrager gave an every interesting sketch of the opening of Oklahoma and his work in getting his lot in 1902. A little history was given us by Mr. Cooley of his first work in Michigan, in Benzie county.

The Program

Song, Mrs. Perkins.

Song, "How I Lost My Lover," by Miss Loomis.

Song, Mrs. Cooley.

Violin Solo, "Recitation," by Mr. Abbott.

"A Reminiscence of General Custer," by Mr. Perkins.

Mrs. Goff with the phonograph.

"The Handsome Young Widow I Met on the Train," by Mr. Barrager.

Song, "They Will Never Come Again"; for encore, "Christening the Baby, Jehosaphat," by Mrs. Waggoner.

Mr. Goff told a true story about "Smashing a Bank-case Window."

Phonograph, Mrs. Goff.

The following resolution of respect for the departed members of the Michigan Association were adopted:

Whereas, we have been called to part with three of the members of the association during the summer just passed.

Therefore, Be it resolved, That while we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, yet "we shall meet, and we shall miss them; there will be one vacant chair."

Mrs. Placeway, Mr. J. H. Collins, and Johnathan Fuller have been very devoted to all work of the association.

Frances R. Riley, Secretary.
Mrs. James Goff, Committee,
Mr. James Goff.

BUICK for 1928

When Buick improves upon Buick—the standard for the year is set

Buick for 1928 introduces a higher standard of beauty and luxury than the world has ever known. Buick interiors are as modish as exquisite drawing-rooms—as harmoniously colored—and as comfortable. Buick's new Fisher bodies are low-swung without any loss of head-room or road-clearance.

And so, down to the smallest detail of construction, wherever refinements could be made, Buick has made them. Again Buick has improved upon Buick. Again the standard for the year is set.

L. U. ZIMMERMAN ACQUIRES ENTIRE STOCK OF THE CONN DEPARTMENT STORE TODAY

The Conn Department Store passed into the hands of a new owner this week, when L. U. Zimmerman, who has been manager of the store for the past eleven years, acquired the entire stock and good will of one of the largest department stores in the county.

Mr. Zimmerman came to Florida about fifteen years ago from Pennsylvania, to regain his health, locating for a time at Kissimmee Park with a view to developing a small farm and grove. Later he went to Kissimmee where he worked as public accountant until he moved to St. Cloud in 1916 and took charge of the Conn Department Store, which business he has successfully managed during the eleven years of his residence here.

The Conn Department Store under the management of Mr. Zimmerman has always been the leader in that line of business, and in acquiring the business for himself Mr. Zimmerman

That the store has passed to the ownership of Mr. Zimmerman will be pleasing information to their large patronage. The Zimmermans have a comfortable home at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, where they prove genial hosts on many social occasions.

POULTRYMEN MEET IN KISSIMMEE TOMORROW

An important meeting of Osceola county poultry raisers has been called at Kissimmee for tomorrow, Friday, September 9, by J. R. Gunn, county agent. In his letter announcing the time and place and purpose of the meeting Mr. Gunn says:

Friday afternoon of this week at two-thirty we are planning to have a meeting of all the poultry raisers of the county, both large and small, in the room next to the Osceola Hardware store, at the end of Broadway.

We would like very much to have every person in the county who has any poultry products for sale, or who is planning to put poultry products on the market, attend this meeting. We will make the meeting as short as possible to cover the two or three subjects we hope to get information on.

There are several important points of information we would like to bring before the growers, and also use it as an inventory meeting of who and where the poultry raisers are in the county.

Mr. F. A. Howard of the Polk County Poultry Association will be with us and discuss plans now under way for the marketing of poultry products of the entire central section of the state.

Please be sure to help us make this meeting a success by attending yourself, and encourage your neighbors who are raising chickens for market purposes to attend also.

A LITTLE PREMATURE

"I tell you I won't have this room," protested the lady from the country to the bellboy. "I ain't goin' to pay my good money for such a small room. You think just because I'm from a small town—" The boy interrupted: "Step in, madam. This ain't your room. This is the elevator."—Leader-Republican.

FRANKLIN N. WOOD IS POET LAUREATE OF FLORIDA

DAYTONA BEACH—Governor John W. Martin this week, under authority of a joint resolution adopted at the spring session of the legislature, appointed Franklin N. Wood, internationally known poet of Daytona Beach, as Poet Laureate of Florida.

The appointment, a purely honorary one, results from the fact that Mr. Wood, a former corporation lawyer, after suffering a physical breakdown, came to Daytona Beach four years ago and since that time has given world wide publicity to this commonwealth through the publication of descriptive Florida poems in American, Canadian and European newspapers and poetry magazines; also through the medium of two books of poems, one entitled "Florida and Other Poems" and the other "Sunset Horns." The last named volume is now coming off the press of Dorrance & Company, Philadelphia, and has been dedicated by the author to Governor Martin.

On the same day Governor Martin named Pleasant D. Gold, also of Daytona Beach, as Chronicler Laureate, in tribute to the ability of Mr. Gold in writing and publishing "In Florida's Dawn," a widely read historical novel, and other historical publications.

WHO'S WHO AMONG THE DEAF
By Phil

With wheels of industry stilled in all places of business on Labor Day, the deaf populace celebrated the day here and there and when the roll call was made at the close of festivity, no casualties had been reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Goetz spent Sunday and Monday in Daytona Beach, greeting old friends and making new acquaintances. While there they attended the religious service Sunday afternoon which was conducted by the writer.

The families of Messrs R. W. Davis and Raymond Sapp arrived in the afternoon of Labor Day. The reports having enjoyed every minute of their summer vacation in West Virginia and Ohio.

Nicholas Murphy is among the new arrivals at the county farm and finds everything there to his liking. He will remain there until unemployment becomes a thing of the past.

R. W. Davis enjoyed a respite from labor, utilizing it in Daytona Beach and Monday. On his return he was greatly surprised to learn his family had arrived home from West Virginia earlier than he had anticipated.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Philpott left Sunday morning for Daytona Beach, where they took part in the afternoon service. They returned Monday evening.

Miss Ruby Padgett planned to spend Labor Day in Daytona Beach, but at the eleventh hour changed her mind and stayed at home with folks for the celebration.

Walter Dean of Auburndale motorcycled to this city last Saturday and after an evening of enjoyable company with friends he returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Austin, of Orlando, were here Saturday evening and received hearty congratulations from their numerous friends upon their marriage which took place at Kissimmee a week previous. Mr. Austin, who is secretary of the Florida Association of the Deaf, is employed in the photo-engraving department of the Orlando Reporter-Star.

C. J. Schmidt, of Grant, stopped off here Tuesday long enough to greet his friends on his way home from Tampa where he was one of the many Labor Day celebrants.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wright passed through this city last Wednesday to Miami from St. Petersburg. While here they took advantage of a brief visit with their friends.

Ben Lorens, of Kissimmee, was a recent visitor here. He has a large circle of friends and relatives who were glad to meet him.

Harley Goetz, of Miami, has entered the employ of the St. Cloud Dry Cleaners. He is a presser of many years' experience.

FIFTY-TWO MILLIONS

Fifty-two million people are using gas every day in their homes, according to a report by the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

A survey covering 7,130,000 homes in 1926 communities throughout the country has just been completed by the Federation to determine the use of, and need for, modern household equipment and appliances.

In American cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population, all of which have gas service, 69 per cent of the homes are equipped with gas ranges and 33 per cent have gas-fired water heaters. In cities of 100,000 and more the survey shows that 80 per cent of the homes have gas ranges and fifty per cent have gas water heaters.

BIG SURPRISE

Johnny, 10 years old, applied for a job as grocery boy for the summer. The grocer wanted a serious-minded youth, so he put Johnny to a little test.

"Well, my boy, what would you do with a million dollars?"

"Oh, gee, I don't know—I wasn't expecting so much at the start."—Passing Show.

COMRADE CROCKER ENJOYS BIRTH-DAY PARTY

Mr. Thomas B. Crocker, our well known townsman, entertained a few friends at a dinner at the Seminole Hotel on last Tuesday, it being the occasion of his 84th birthday.

Covers were laid for eight persons and at the table were Mr. and Mrs. S. D. McDowell of St. Cloud, formerly of Maysville, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Merritt of St. Cloud, formerly of Batavia, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. McMurray, Mrs. F. L. Prescott of St. Cloud, formerly of Champlain, N. Y., and the host, Mr. Crocker, formerly of Sardina, N. Y.

Mr. Crocker, who is well known and liked in St. Cloud, where he has spent so many years, was a civil war veteran, having served four years in that conflict. He enlisted in September, 1861, in the 44th N. Y. V., designated as the Peoples Ellsworth Avengers in honor of Col. Ellsworth, who was killed in the Marshall Hotel at Alexandria, Virginia, by the landlord, while the former was removing a Confederate flag from the hotel.

During May of this year, Comrade Crocker went north and visited friends at his old home in Sardina, N. Y., and on Decoration Day he assisted in decorating the graves of a number of his old comrades. He returned to St. Cloud only a few days ago, looking as young as ever and full of optimism. He is as active as the average man at sixty.

Mr. Crocker has been a member of three G. A. R. posts which have passed out. He is now a member of Mitchell Post, G. A. R., of St. Cloud.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Ivor G. Hyndman, Minister

Plans are now under way for the proper observance of the anual rally day, which falls this year on October 2nd. A committee consisting of Mrs. L. U. Zimmerman, chairman, Mrs. O. P. Hollingsworth and Mrs. Nina Rummell will have general charge of the activities for the day. Every class president and teacher is urged to make every effort to secure a full attendance.

Mrs. Dorothy Taylor will be the soloist at the morning service next Sunday morning. Her solos last Sunday morning were of an unusually high order and were much appreciated.

The Union service for the evening will be at the Presbyterian church with Dr. Campbell as the preacher.

The regular meeting of the Sunday school board will take place next Tuesday morning.

The Ladies Aid Society will serve dinner on Friday, September 23rd.

The Epworth League is preparing an operetta to be given in the near future.

OHIOANS TO RETURN CAPTURED FLA. FLAG TO TALLAHASSEE FOR MARIANNA REUNION

FIRST DIVISION'S BANNER HELD SINCE CIVIL WAR WILL BE RETURNED AND RECEIVED BY GOVERNOR MARTIN—COL. APPLEYARD IS NOTIFIED

MARIANNA.—Complete plans have been worked out for the presentation to the United Confederate Veterans of Florida, at their annual reunion here September 27 to 29, of the flag of the First Florida cavalry and Fourth Florida infantry, held since its capture during the Civil war by what is now known as the soldiers' relief commission, of Toledo, Ohio.

This was the announcement of General T. J. Appleyard, of Tallahassee, commander of the state division of the soldiers of the gray, who stated that he had just received a confirmation of the presentation plans from W. W. Aleorn, head of the Toledo commission.

The flag to be presented belonged to Finley's brigade. It fell into the hands of the Northern forces at Franklin Tenn., September 24, 1864, in one of the hardest-fought battles of the war between the states. The commander of the brigade was Gen. J. J. Finley, father of Captain Charles A. Finley, who for many years has held the office of secretary of the state senate.

Mr. Aleorn, in his letter to General Appleyard, stated that trustees of the Soldiers' Relief Commission had named as a committee to present the colors to the Florida veterans.

"The flag," says the letter, "is draped in the case containing it in such manner as that the regimental number is not visible, and cannot be ascertained until it is taken from the case for packing.

"Owing to the possibility the fabric may be so far decayed as to make its carriage a care, our present plans provide, as soon as we can prepare a package that will ensure its safe delivery to you, we will take it from the case now containing it, ascertain the regiment, and repack for transmission."

If additional tentative plans are worked out, the flag may be finally presented the state of Florida for safe-keeping at a formal ceremony at Tallahassee. The presentation could be held October 1, Governor Martin to receive the colors on the steps of the capitol, in the presence of Captain Finley, whose father carried the flag, and amid the booming of a salute from the local National Guard company. The Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce is in charge of that phase of the arrangements.

One of the most elaborate programs in the history of the organization in Florida has been prepared by General Appleyard for the Marianna reunion. It will be filled with business sessions and entertainment to keep the veterans busy for the three-day stay.

The complete program is to be announced shortly by the state commander.

STATE ENGINEERS MAKE CHECK ON PHONE SYSTEM

A. B. Greene and Wilkins Linhart, telephone engineers of the Florida Railroad Commission, were in St. Cloud during the week checking up the physical condition of the property of the St. Cloud telephone system, owned by the Florida Telephone Corporation.

The engineers stated that it would be impossible for them to state when their report on the physical value of the St. Cloud plant could be turned in at Tallahassee, as a further checking against the books of the corporation at Leesburg would be necessary before the final report was made.

Their investigation here was a consequence of the recent hearings at the chamber of commerce before the members of the State Railroad Commission, as a result for application of the Telephone company to increase its rates.

RAISING ONIONS HERE

Florida farmers are becoming interested in the raising of onions. Many sections of the state will go in for onions this season. Marion county is planning an onion demonstration fostered by the Seaboard Railway and under the direction of the County Agent Hiatt.

One out of every thirty-three persons in the world is always on the sick list.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. Howard M. Campbell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, who was unavoidably delayed last week could not get here for last Sunday's services, but will preach Sunday morning next. All are invited to come and hear him.

Westminister Aid

The Westminister Aid of the Presbyterian Church will meet at the church, Tuesday, September 13, at 2:30 p. m. Come prepared to work for a bazaar and extend a welcome to our new minister and his family. Visitors are always welcome.

"MISSOURI GIRL"

"The Missouri Girl", which appeared at the G. A. R. Hall last Friday evening, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Triplett of this city, was a splendid drama-comedy, and the actors, who were selected from local talent, did well in their respective parts.

The aptness with which Daisy, (Miss Florence Ross), and Jack Henderson, (Mr. Paul Malon), grasped and acted their leading roles in the comedy must have been as pleasing to Manager Triplett as it was pleasingly received by a splendid audience.

Mr. Triplett proposes staging further dramas from time to time during the approaching season, and his marked success with "Missouri Girl" bespeaks for him an exceptional fitness for the task.

FALL STYLES AT LAKEVIEW

Fine line of new fall hats, Ladies and Misses dresses, in crepe, satin and georgette will be on sale by Mrs. R. H. Hatcher at the Lakeview Hotel tomorrow and Saturday.

The stock will be closed out, says Mrs. Hatcher, so that none of these goods will be offered after Saturday evening.

CLOTHES IN COUNTRY AND CITY

Contrary to the commonly accepted idea that farm families spend much less for clothing than their city cousins, an investigation by the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture indicates that clothing allowances are approximately equal in the two groups. Only in families having incomes well above the average is there a wide difference, with city families spending more. In 1,537 farm families covered by the survey the average total expenditure was $1,550 of which $225 was spent for clothing. City families with about the same total expenditure averaged $228 for clothing.

PENNY WISE—POUND FOOLISH!

To show that people read the newspapers for complete and authentic information concerning activities at their own door, scores of families in St. Cloud apparently did not know that their favorite store was to be closed all day Labor Day.

The local Bakery kept open a while, and, as one man who visited the Tribune office, said, sold out very early. Practically all of the other stores were closed and folks who had not provided on Saturday for all the kitchen needs on Monday were compelled to drive elsewhere to buy groceries.

All of this could have been avoided—to the benefit of both local merchant and local patron—by the merchant placing an advertisement in last Thursday's Tribune, advising the citizens of St. Cloud to buy on Saturday enough to last until Tuesday.

Furthermore, who knows whether or not some permanent customers did not find a place "just a cheap, with quick and courteous service, and just as good goods" in their rural search for groceries last Monday! That always happens, and the rule remains.

True enough, a sign was conspicuous on the doors Monday morning, too late, "We Close Labor Day." Who noticed that during the rush on Saturday? Not one-half the people who visited the St. Cloud merchandising houses.

Newspaper advertising is given up to be the best and most effective advertising on earth. Why shouldn't the rule work here?

TRIBUNE FAMILY ENJOYS A DAY BY THE SEA

A beautiful basket dinner was spread before a majority of the members of the St. Cloud TRIBUNE family at Melbourne Beach last Sunday, where the ladies effectively displayed their knowledge of good cooking and what it required to constitute a full and appetizing meal.

The party traveled by automobiles, the going and return trips being made between the suns, without a single incident to mar the comfort or spirit of the occasion.

Including the members of the Tribune staff and their families, together with the publisher and his family and friends of both, the party numbered 20 persons, and aside from the splendid dinner served at one o'clock, bathing in the ocean featured the outing.

Those who comprised the party were:

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cowger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tullis and two children, Barbara and Jane, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wigginton, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hughes and two children, Bobbie and Jean, Mr. Raymond Sorg, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. FLASHES OF FLORIDA FACTS

By MOSES FOLSOM

"GOD'S GARDEN"—Under this title Harvey Smith McCowan has written a very entertaining little booklet devoted to Florida. His summer address is Owyr d'Alene, Idaho, and his winter address is Winter Haven, Florida. He tells of his travels and studies in many states and in connection decklded that "there is only one Florida—God's Garden created for the delight and joy of the children of men."

OUT OF DOORS IN FLORIDA—In Florida the weather is a benediction. All seasons and all days permit outdoor activity. Instead of having snow and ice bound streams during the Christmas season, oranges and strawberries are ripe, gardens give of their abundance to the industrious, and the fishing is good in our lakes and rivers. And there's as big fish in the seas about us as ever were caught.

MILLIONAIRES — The United States bureau of internal revenue reports that 207 persons had incomes in 1925 amounting to a million or more dollars each. Florida is the only state of the Southeast with millionaires, having three, one paying on an income from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000; one paying on from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000, and one on from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. Of the four persons in the $5,000,000 class, two of whom, presumably John D. Rockefeller and Henry Ford, have winter homes in Florida.

WHY NOT?—The Lakeland Star-Telegram says: "A gentleman from California who has been touring Florida and who ate luncheon at a local hotel within the past week made the comment that if all the glasses of iced tea that he had seen since his arrival in Florida were thrown out of the window and Florida orange juice substituted, the orange industry in Florida would receive an encouragement far beyond the realization of the average citizen. Furthermore, he pointed to the use of orange juice as a factor in promoting health."

TAX ON CATS—St. Petersburg has an ordinance imposing a tax on cats. That reduces the number of bird killers and the result is that that popular report has more song birds and fewer insect pests than places not favored by such a wise law. Cats kill more birds than any other animal. Cats pay no favorites. They will bite and scratch their owners as promptly as they will a stranger. The United States department of agriculture urges the use of traps to catch rats and mice. Home-fed cats never hunt for rats and mice.

FLORIDA FISH ON EXHIBITION—Visitors to New York will find in the aquarium at Battery Park a large collection of Florida fish. A few days ago an official of the aquarium sailed from Key West with more than 5000 specimens of members of the finny tribe, gathered in the waters about Key West in one creek. The collection will replenish the Florida water exhibits at the aquarium. The waters about Key West afford more than 300 distinct varieties of fish, Mr. Short said, and the fish taken north by him attract more attention among the visitors than fish from any other section of the country.

A WONDER SPOT—Edward W. Bok, who is creating a bird sanctuary and plant arbor on his Mountain Lake property, near Lake Wales in Polk county, is also contructing a carillon or bell tower, one of the largest if not the largest, in the world. It will contain sixty-one bells, the largest weighing fifty tons and the smallest seventeen ounces, in all having a combined weight of 125,000 pounds. Forty-nine tones will be the range. The tower will be 205 feet high, resting on a foundation fifty-one feet square. The park proper has fourteen acres and contains every known tree and plant possible of growing there, besides many varieties of birds are to be seen. the top of the tower will be the highest point in Florida. The 527 feet above sea level, and by far base of the tower on the top of Iron mountain is 324 feet above sea level, while the tower runs up 205 feet. The tower will be of iron and marble and when the bells ring the music will be heard many miles around. This wonderful place, through the generosity of Mr. Bok, will be free to the public.

FLORIDA'S POSSIBILITIES—The St. Augustine Record says that Florida has a little less than one-half of one per cent of the nation's tillable acreage. It's possibilities are shown by the fact that it now produces 81 per cent of the nation's grapefruit, 61 per cent of the peppers that go into the early market, 21 per cent of the watermelons, 41 per cent of the table cucumbers, 24 per cent of the table tomatoes, 29 per cent of the eggplant, 38 per cent of the early snap beans, 16 per cent of the early Irish potatoes and 32 per cent of the nation's celery. In the matter of celery Florida is a world-beater. The total annual production of the country ranges around 21,000 carloads. Florida furnishing nearly 8,000 cars. Out of this 8,000 cars, Seminole county produces more celery than the entire state of California.

YOU ARE THE DUST OF THE EARTH!—A Chicago preacher one Sunday not long ago announced his sermon under the heading of Real Estate. His introductory words, just as applicable in Florida as up in the Windy City, were: "Since we are taught in the Bible that we are made of the dust of the earth, you can understand that the most valuable piece of real estate in this city to you is yourself. Since this piece of ground is so valuable to us, it is a very foolish thing not to make the very best of it. The task of self cultivation is no small one. One of the first things to do is to cultivate the best possible disposition. Another is the development of right interests and the proper estimation of values. You can tell something of the character of an individual by noting the things he is interested in, flowers, in pictures, in scenery, in literature. Learn to appreciate the beautiful. Develop the desire to grow in knowledge, in character, ability and appreciation of the good in everything. In yourself is contained your happiness or your misery, your value or lack of value, your success or your failure. Within you alone is the final determination of what you are, what you shall be and what you do. Nothing else is of value to you, in comparison to what is within your own being."

FOSSILS—Remains of early animal life indicate that Florida was the home of many kinds of beasts, birds and fishes not known now or else extinct. Among them were mastodons, elephants, camels, llamas, sabre-toothed tigers, horses, deer, bison, tapirs, giant sloths and the rhinoceros. The seas had many kinds of used animals. Human fossils indicate that man was here many thousands of years ago. The office of the state geologist at Tallahassee has a large collection of fossils. The state museum at Gainesville under the direction of Prof. T. Van Hyning, has a well classified collection of old time bones and curious things.

HIGH FOOD VALUES OF PORK—Results of scientific experiments have proved that the public's appetite for pork products has a sound basis. Bacon and egg are no accidental combination. Neither is a ham sandwich. There are scientific reasons which explain also why the energetic American people consume pork so liberally. In recent years the consumption of this meat has amounted to about 50 per cent of the total meat dietary in the United States, according to estimates of the total meat dietary in the United States, according to estimates of the U. S. bureau of animal industry. Experiments covering many years show that pork is as digestible as chicken or turkey and so other meat can be served in as many attractive ways.

THE EVERGLADES—Commissioner of Agriculture Nathan Mayo, says there are in the natural Everglades area 2,862,000 acres; in the drainage district 4,370,000 acres; some 3,000,000 acres have been partially reclaimed and 100,000 acres are in actual cultivation. The soil is tremendously rich and large crops of staples are easily produced, with something growing the year around. Eight main canals, 487 miles in all, have been constructed at a cost of about $11,000,000, and it will cost considerably more than the amount already expended to complete the work. The present assessed valuation of the district is $17,000,000 and this will be rapidly increased by the development under way.

THE TUNG OIL INDUSTRY — Tung oil is used in America as the base of practically all modern waterproof, quick-drying varnishes. It is pressed from the nuts. The oil comes from China. Some twenty years ago seeds of the tung oil tree were distributed by the United States Department of Agriculture in several Southern states. The most interesting results were obtained from trees grown at the University of Florida. These are now nearly thirty feet high, with a spread of 25 or more feet. Nearly 10,000 seedlings from them were planted by the educational bureau of the American Paint and Varnish Manufacturers' Association, with the idea of showing farmers the industry's complete faith in the project. As a result, there are now about 5,000 acres of tung oil trees in this country, a large majority in Alachua county, Florida. It looks now as if our state in time will supply the country with tung oil instead of sending to China for it.

DRUG PLANTS—The growing of drug plants is a specialized form of farming and Americans are not much given to it. It is an industry of promise in Florida. Among the products possible of being made profitable in Florida are peppermint, thyme, horse mint, lemon grass, spear mint, sassafras, rose oil, orange and lemon peel oil. Among the growths unknown anywhere in the Union except in South Florida are the pepinae with flowers used for perfumery; the plant producing cardamom seeds; the annatto plant, famous for its orange red dye; the divi-divi, producing quick tanning material; the cananga, producing the Ylang-Ylang perfumery; the Chinese cinnamon, producing an inferior bark and castor oil and buds; the India lemon, grass for making oil of citronella; the lemon gum with highly scented leaves; the Bermuda arrowroot plant; the wax myrtle, producing marketable wax, and many others. Send to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. for farmers' bulletin No. 993 entitled "Drug Plants Under Cultivation."

A VALUABLE FRUIT—A. M. Daniels of 204 Cody street, Tampa, recently wrote in part to the Tribune, as a fruit grower, to this effect:

"The last eight years I have been experimenting to find the best varieties to grow in Florida, and I find nothing so interesting as the fig, which will often bear fruit when one year old from a cutting. This is the only fruit that grows without having a visible blossom. It bears its fruit at the base of the leaves and as long as the tree grows, it will bear fruit.

"I had ripe figs the first of June and had them at our Thanksgiving dinner. Branches that have grown from two to three feet this year had ripe fruit their full length, six or eight at the ends that will be ripe a month later. These branches have new leaves and will soon show figs at the base, making it an ever-bearing fig.

"A fig tree should be cut back the same as the grape, as it bears from new wood. It should be pruned to a uniform compact top, protecting the fruit and branches from the sun. A fig should ripen on the tree and be picked three times a week. Figs have sold in Tampa for $1 a quart or $32 a bushel and a large amount could be marketed. It will grow in any soil that will produce corn and needs no more care."

Nowhere Greater Progress

The Christian Science Monitor of Boston in a recent article, entitled "Nowhere Greater Progress Than in the Marvelous South," said among other things that "Remarkable as has been the development of agricultural, manufacturing commerce and education in what are referred to as the newer sections of the United States, it may be said that nowhere has greater progress along these lines been made in comparatively recent years than in the South. The editor of the Monitor spent several weeks in Florida last winter and said some generous things about our state as the result of his visit.

Florida's Advantages

The St. Augustine Record calls attention to the fact that Florida has four months during which it is the only tomato shipping state. Its competition during that period comes principally from the West Indies and Mexico. The tomato crop is one of the most important of the vegetable crops, not only because of the large amount shipped fresh, but also because of its extensive use for canning and manufacture. Within the memory of the living the tomato was considered poisonous, and was grown as an ornamental in the garden. More tomatoes are now canned than any other crop. While Florida has four month during which it is practically the only shipping state marketing fresh tomatoes, it also has two months during which it commands the domestic market for strawberries.

Florida's Official Song

Our state has an official song, entitled Florida, My Florida, written by Dr. C. V. Waugh, former professor in the old agricultural college at Lake City. It was adopted by a concurrent resolution of the legislature in 1913. It is adapted to the tune of Maryland, and its use was recommended in the public schools and general gatherings where singing is a part of the program. The words are as follows:

Land of my birth, bright sunkissed land,
Florida, my Florida.
Laved by the gulf and ocean grand,
Florida, my Florida.
Of all the states in East or West,
Unto my heart thou art the best;
Here may I live, here may I rest,
Florida, my Florida.

In country, town, or hills and dells,
Florida, my Florida,
The rhythmic chimes of thy school bells
Florida, my Florida,
Will call thy children day by day
To learn to walk the patriot's way,
Firmly to stand for thee for aye,
Florida, my Florida.

Thy golden fruit the world outshines
Florida, my Florida,
Thy gardens and thy phosphate mines,
Florida, my Florida.
Yield their rich store of good supply,
To still the voice of hunger's cry,
For thee we'll live, for thee we'll die,
Florida, my Florida.

Thy oppressors rood can't rest on thee
Florida, my Florida,
Thy sons and daughters free must be,
Florida, my Florida.
From North and South, from East and West,
From freezing blasts they come for rest,
And find in thee their earnest quest,
Florida, my Florida.

When life is brittle and woes o'ertake,
Florida, my Florida,
Thy sons and daughters quick will make,
Florida, my Florida,
The sacrifice of love and life
To save from woe, from ills and strife,
To foil thy foes in danger rife,
Florida, my Florida.

Singular to record another Florida poet, W. C. Baugh, whose name rhymest with that of the author of the official song, wrote the following to be sung to the same tune:

O, lovely land of sunny skies,
Florida, my Florida.
My praise of thee shall ever rise,
Florida, my Florida.
No wintry storms o'er rule o'er thee,
Thou land that lies 'twixt gulf and sea,
Forever fanned by breezes free,
Florida, my Florida.

A thousand lakes reflect thy skies,
Florida, my Florida.
Here many a fairy prospect lies,
Florida, my Florida.
Thy groves a perfume flings the breeze
Thy flowers yield the giant trees,
Thy shores are washed by many seas,
Florida, my Florida.

'Twas thou the Spanish tried to tame,
Florida, my Florida.
And gave to thee thy lovely name,
Florida, my Florida.
But not for him thy wedded hand,
Thou fairest of Columbia's band,
Beneath the starry flag we stand,
Florida, my Florida.

Florida's official motto—on the state seal—is "In God We Trust." The official flower is the Orange Blossom. The official bird is the Mocking Bird. And P. D. Gold, the historian of Daytona Beach, was recently designated as chronicler laureate of the state while Franklin N. Wood of the same place is poet laureate.

What Is Commercial Fertilizer?

The term commercial fertilizer as used in the law of Florida, shall be taken to mean all substances containing nitrogen, potash or phosphoric acid; also cotton seed meal, castor pomace, tobacco stems, tobacco dust or tobacco meal, sold, offered or exposed for sale and ordinarilly used for manurial purposes, excepting barnyard or stable manure and crude cotton seed. Any dealer who misrepresents the ingredients of the fertilizer he sells is liable to a fine of $500 for the first offense and $1,000 for the second. The state chemist, upon application, shall furnish at any time to an applicant a full analysis of any brand of fertilizer required. Said analysis shall set forth the percentage of ammonia, potash, soluble in water, of available and insoluble phosphoric acid, with the statement of the commercial value of each ingredient, which valuation shall be uniform and not above the real value of such ingredient. The commissioner of agriculture at Tallahassee has the enforcement of the fertilizer law.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

The Daughters of Veterans held their annual picnic at the city park on Tuesday, August 30 and a fine musical program was rendered by Miss Wilna Lluna, who gave several selections on the violin.

Miss Hibbard presided at the piano and Miss McCrea gave vocal solos, all of which were markedly enjoyed. After this program, games were played and following these an evening picnic dinner was spread at five o'clock.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION

The Daughters of Union Veterans met at the usual hour in the G. A. R. hall with President Emma Raymond in the chair, and the roll call found eight officers present.

General Orders No. 7 were read announcing final arrangements for National Encampment at Grand Rapids, Michigan. Tickets will be on sale from September 6, good until midnight October 20 at one fare for the round trip. Stop-over privileges can be arranged.

The sick calls reported were 4, with two bouquets and two sprays, after which the National Pass Word was given.

The press correspondent, Mary VanMeter, who is visiting in New York, reported that she was having a delightful time and sent greetings to all.

The amount realized from our entertainment was $52.90, with expenses deducted leaving $38.85, for which the organization thanks all those who participated, as well as the public for their liberal patronage. A contribution was made for the Red Cross to be used for soldiers over sea at Christmas time.

Mrs. Mix will be the leader at Veterans Association, Daughters' Day, Saturday, September 24.

Adjournment was taken until the next meeting, Tuesday, September 27, 1927, at 2:30 p. m.

THE LEADING CHARACTERS:

EDISON FORBES, a young resident of Scottdale with an inherent craving for liquor is held for the death of a woman who has been killed by a gasoline truck. Circumstantial evidence points to Forbes and rather than tell the truth of the episode, he stands trial, which results in a long prison sentence. He is soon pardoned; however, but back in Scottdale he and

PATSY JANE, his trusting wife, agree that public sentiment against him is too strong so they migrate north to some land that has been in the family for years. While there they form the acquaintance of ISAIAH SEALMAN, a shifty neighbor who is anxious to buy their land. Eddie learns that the back taxes amount to over eight hundred dollars so as he has five months to pay he decides to refuse Sealman's offer of $200 and try and get final title to the property—Sealman's offer having led him to think it very valuable. But things do not go well. Eddie drinks heavily from some bootlegger's process, is forgiven by Patsy, but soon after falls in with the same gang, gets drunk, and wakes up in a freight car in Chicago—many miles away. Stricken with remorse he returns to his cabin but finds his wife had left and in her place a ruffian, who orders him out. A fight ensues in which Eddie finally knocks his opponent senseless.

After ejecting the intruder Eddie finds he seems to be in league with Sealman. Eddie goes to Long Portage and sees Patsy, who is working for Kinnane, a lawyer. She announces that she will not join him until he definitely quits drinking. Determining to comply, he finds a job with Darrenot, a rancher, and for several weeks refrains from the bottle that cheers. But one Sunday, Eddie walks on the lake trail, and encounters a series of rum smugglers. Among them he recognizes his "friends" who shanghaied him to Chicago — notwithstanding, Forbes hails them in greeting.

CHAPTER XV

Demon Rum Again

Culley and Jake, confused, took his proffered hand with mumbled greetings. The third man was introduced as Oscar. "Say," Eddie went on, his smile taking a tinge of humorous ruefulness, "there was an awful kick in that last bottle. Do you know where it was when I came out of it with a head like a haystack?"

The driver and Culley exchanged glances. "No, where?" asked the guard.

"Coming into Chicago in a freight car."

"You don't say," ejaculated the driver.

"Surest thing you know. Where'd you leave me?"

Again the exchange of puzzled looks. "Long Portage," returned Jake.

"Well," went on Eddie, easily, "I don't remember a thing after that bird drink, although it seems to me I had a dream about a box-car. I must have wandered to the yards and slid down in the car to sleep it off. They didn't see me and locked the door. Boy. That booze had a kick."

He had convinced them, and there was a decided increase of cordiality in their manner. Oscar and Jake smiled sympathetically. "I know," explained Jake, "it wasn't very good stuff. We were all sick next day. You can't always be sure of the quality. But we've changed wholesalers since then. We're getting the real Canadian Scotch now."

Eddie sat on a log by the roadside and the three returned to their task. They regarded him, evidently, as one of them—a man dependent upon liquor who would not dream of betraying the illicit traffic which almost daily crawled across the state like a snake.

"Ship's just in, I take it" he said carelessly. "Passed the other four trucks down the road aways."

"She got in at dawn," replied Oscar. "We work up there all night. Maybe you think it wasn't cold, sleepin' on the deck of that truck with only one blanket."

The tire was bolted, and the truck was ready to take up its journey. While the other two clambered to their places, Culley went to the box under the seat and drew forth a bottle of golden brown liquor. "Needn't be afraid of this stuff kid," he said. "It's the real goods. I think it's the best we've hauled this season. Hey, Jake?"

"Uh huh," agreed the driver.

"So have a real one on us," concluded Culley, waving his hand. He knew that he could partake of this liquor. Though they had drugged and shanghaied him before, it was not because of personal enmity. They did it for some mysterious reason which he had not been able to solve, and at the instigation of some unknown adversary. This was a peace offering of some, at least reasonably pure. They were making amends for shabby treatment. Which shabby treatment they would repeat, however, if inducements were offered.

He had fooled them and put himself up against one of the gravest crises of his life. Craving for liquor was quickening at every nerve. The kick of the alcohol—how he yearned for it. Alcohol was in his hand. He could almost smell its fumes. And he knew that, if the actual odor came to his nostrils, he was gone.

Cold perspiration came out on his forehead. His mouth went dry. His teeth were clenched as though the tetanus germ had locked them. Ridges of muscle appeared on cheeks which had grown haggard. The fight was on, and it was going to a finish.

The tension eased. "I don't have to settle it right this minute," he told himself speciously. "Let's go and see about that ship."

He wore no coat, for the day was bright and warm. He thrust the bottle inside his flannel shirt where it gurgled against his body with every step. He was marvelously relieved that a reprieve had been granted, even on terms so shabby.

The cove was deserted. Far out on the lake he discerned the dumpy outlines of a good sized fishing-tug, heading for Canadian waters again. There were few marks of the unloading. The bench had been raked over, probably, and there was no one in sight. But a stroll up the shore revealed behind masking undergrowth a log house built partially below the lake level. A channel ran to its strongly-padlock door. Part of the overhanging bank had been tunneled to receive the rear of the house.

"They keep their skiffs in there," he mused. "I suppose if all the trucks aren't here when they need them, the stuff is locked up until they come."

The possibilities of the cove were exhausted and his own problem pressed. The longing for liquor lay in wait so that when mind and body were unoccupied, it seized on them. "While I'm busy it isn't so bad," he thought. "Well, let's try keeping busy."

Below the cove the shoreline turned abruptly to the east, taking in many square miles. He plunged into this wilderness which was to him virgin. It was pleasant walking. The soil was more than mere sand, and firm underfoot. There was harwood among the jackpines and an occasional great white pine tree which had evaded the axe and saw.

He drove steadily eastward, holding the appetite at bay by physical exertion. Not for a moment did he forget it, like a tiger it lay in wait, ready to spring. The gurgle-gurgle against his side was its taunting cry.

He had started on a faint trail, but this had long since disappeared. The silence was profound, except for the subdued twitter of birds and his own faint footsteps. A crash in the undergrowth ahead startled him. A magnificent buck crossed a little clearing and zoomed like an airplane over the top of a fallen tree. Two does followed, taking the same prodigious leap in graceful fashion.

There was no breath of air stirring. He wiped the sweat from his face with his sleeve. At a rivulet which was one of the headwater streams of Portage creek he stopped to drink deeply. The cold water was gratefully refreshing. He plunged straight bearing a little to the south.

Somehow he did not dare sit down to rest. He was afraid of the bottle. If he could only keep going he had a chance to win. A blister formed on his right heel and his shoe rasped painfully at every step. His clothing was quite wet. An unnoted blackberry briar had drawn itself across his face, leaving a red trail that smarted and stung.

Noon came and passed. He was walking automatically now, obsessed with one idea only—to keep going on and on and on. The earth became soggy. His feet stumbled on slippery, regularly recurring humps, and he stepped.

The underbrush had become very thick and high. He was following a green tunnel through it. The humps under foot were the remains of a corduroy roads, built to facilitate the taking out of logs years ago. He followed the road. Within a little time it ended on the edge of a cedar swamp.

A devil's cradle was ahead of him. Dead cedars with white trunks and short, spiky branches lay, stood and leaned in the stagnant black water. In places the trunks were five deep in inextricable tangles. Here and there was long and brilliantly-green grass, but he knew there was no solid footing where such tufts grow. It was a cunning trap to snare the trusting. A foot such a tuft meant instant descent into sucking black ooze. Crows cawed dismally on some of the trees which still stood upright.

CHAPTER XVI

A Victory

It was impossible to determine the area of the swamp. The stiff and hostile trunks melted away against a line of blue hills on the horizon. Not far ahead, though, there was an oasis, an island which rose a few feet above the black water and was crowded with vigorous trees. It was perhaps an acre in extent. There was a breeze over there, the trees swayed.

"This seems to be a sort of—well, a symbol," he thought. "It's infernally hard going. It's dangerous. I don't know how far across. It would be easier to side step it, to go around. But it's in my path. It blocks the way I'm going. Why should I let a cedar swamp buffalo me? I wonder if this booze question wouldn't have been easier if I'd fought it in the past instead of sidestepping? Of course there isn't any answer for that. But I know I couldn't think so much of myself hereafter if I ducked this. So here goes."

Before many yards had been covered he regretted his decision to cross the swamp. It seemed useless and foolhardy to battle this grim and treacherous area. The labor was appallingly hard. He crawled on hands and knees along the slanting logs, their spikes bruising him and tearing the skin.

Sometimes he slipped on the trunks which had gathered moss that made them as smooth as ice. Then he barely escaped dropping into wells of black water, paved far below with muck in solution. He knew the mixture had the clinging power of quicksand. The sun beat down viciously.

At last he won the oasis and flung himself down to rest in the shade of a good sized tree. His chest heaved. He closed his eyes and fought the vivid outline of an action which his appetite painted over and over on his brain.

In this action he saw himself withdrawing the bottle from his shirt, removing the cork and tilting his head so that the fiery liquid might run down his throat. He could sniff the beguiling bequest of the raw liquor and feel the filliped nerves tingle to the ends of his fingers and toes. The counterfeit sensations caused him faintly to shudder with a longing to make them authentic.

He raised himself on his elbow to look out over the waste which intervened between the island and the further shore. It was not so distant as it had seemed, but it was greater than the first lap. He shook his head. "No booze until that's behind me. Too dangerous. I need everything I have to make it."

He took up the journey again. Now progress was slower. He was tired. The tangle seemed worse, the water deeper and blacker. Once he slipped and was immersed hip deep in the tepid water. He hastily crawled back to the grudging surface of a slender stick.

As he crawled one while pool on a cedar whose far end was insecurely anchored, so that the trunk rocked with his weight, the bottle slipped from his shirt and plopped into the water. He straddled the log to consider.

It was getting late. The shadows were long over this fiends' play-ground. But he could not leave without the bottle. His nerves were searching with renewed insistence. Appetite beat upon him, shook him, tore him. He had to have that liquor. Yet he knew that the clamor was fictitious, and that there was a deeper reason for repossessing himself of the flask. If he went on without it, he was cravenly avoiding the possible knock-out. It would be a drawn battle which he would have to fight again. The whiskey might be the bludgeon of defeat, but it might also be the symbol of victory. He might lose to it, but he could never win by running away from it.

He removed his canvas leggins, his shoes and socks, as he perched perilously on the greasy trunk. He let himself down into the pool. His toes encountered the muck. His arms were extended their full length before his toes encountered the bottle in the sooty depths. It was a task requiring muscular strain and dexterity, to grip the bottle between his feet and bring it surfaced.

A new difficulty presented itself. He could not climb back on the log without the aid of his feet. He released a hand to reach downward for the bottle. It eluded him, and sank again. As he lunged for it, the other hand slipped and he went under.

Back at the surface he shuddered with distaste and clung to the log. The dead water and the treacherous, molasses like muck filled him with nausea. Yet they had to be braved. He took a full breath and thrust himself under. His arm encountered the muck and was absorbed in it, yet his fingers felt no bottle. His shoulders, the top of his head were in the ooze, yet the desperate fingers closed only on slime. Closing his eyes he rammed downward until the muck was in his nostrils.

It drew him, sucked him insidiously into its grip. Panic that made his eyes pop and his heart race possessed him. But something elemental and fundamental would not permit him to withdraw. Both arms worked in a wide circle. His lung cried for air. His eardrums cracked. He was undergoing all the agonies of drowning.

At last! A fingertip touched it. He worked lower, grasped the bottle firmly, and splashed frantically upward. The mud clung to him, it was reluctant to let him go. But a submerged log aided him with a firm footing. He heaved waist high above the surface, now as opaque as a puddle of ink.

He breathed deeply and thankfully. While he dangled with one hand he inserted the bottle into one of his shoes, which were tied together and swung across the log. His reserve of strength was all but drained before he was on the greasy log again, his shoes on his feet, the bottle buttoned within his shirt.

Sunset was at hand before he won the shore, to find another corduroy road opening out conveniently in front of him. And he was trembling with weakness. The bottle was at his lips.

Patsy Jane's face came up before him, her eyes swimming in tears as she raised them to him in Lawyer Kinnane's office. There was that fond, tremulous smile of her lips. Somehow the wonder of her, the priceless boon of her love, came to him as it never had before. She was the most precious thing in the world.

He jammed the cork home again, the liquor untasted, and thrust the bottle back into his wet shirt. He strode buoyantly away, laughing with joy and relief. The enemy was defeated.

Though not entirely routed. There were other waves of clamor, though their strength was noticeably less. The craving died down as darkness thickened. The liquor became unimportant until he no longer thought of it.

It was the late when he struck a road leading in the direction of the ranch. It was nearly midnight when he trudged wearily into the log bunkhouse which he shared with the other hands. He could hear their snores through the thin board partitions. He lighted his oil lamp, and stood for a time surveying the liquor. With a little shake he addressed it.

"Oldtimer, you did your best. But it wasn't good enough. You're licked, and licked for keeps. And if you don't believe it, I'm going to make you prisoner, sort of keep you around, to prove it."

COLLEGE HEAD SAYS FLORIDA HOLDS FINE FUTURE

TAMPA, Fla.—Maj. Eugene Schmidt, commander of Marist Military College and for several years prominent in the Georgia National Guard, is spending several days in Tampa while on a tour of Florida. He is accompanied by his brother, Robert Schmidt, a business man of Miami.

"I have always heard summer was not a good time to visit Florida," said Major Schmidt. "But the vacation period was the only chance I had to come here and spend any length of time, so I decided to make the visit during the summer, and I've had no cause to regret it. I have been as far down as Miami and have covered a great portion of the state by automobile. I have been surprised and delighted to find conditions so greatly improved and the prospects so promising for an exceptionally good fall and winter.

"In the meantime I have decided Florida is a good place to visit in the summer time, and I notice from my own observations that a very large number of citizens from other sections of the country agree with me on that point. I have heard many Floridians express the opinion that the number of visitors in the state this summer has been much larger than is usually the case and I can well believe it, judging by the many cars on the highways and the good summer business the hotels in the various cities seem to be doing.

"To my mind this situation promises well for Florida, because I think it shows outsiders are more deeply interested in the state and its possibilities now than ever before and they are coming here when things are comparatively quiet to get a real line on the prospects. I feel sure most of them have some definite end in view and that they are not traveling through the state at this time solely to enjoy the scenery, however delightful that may be."

Improvement on Tenth Street

In order to try to expedite the improvement of Tenth street from the west city limits to the wide paving of that street, it was voted to request the city consolidation to confer with the county commissioners in an effort to have the county rebuild as many blocks of Tenth street from the west limits east as possible, at the time the county rebuilds the road between St. Cloud and Kissimmee, charging it to the city's share of road taxes that will be paid to St. Cloud by the county commissioners out of the road tax.

Commissioner Parker asked for an expression about what kind of a band the business men thought we should have next season, and this matter was made a special order for next Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

REPUBLICANS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS FOR 1928 CAMPAIGN

industries by adequate tariffs against alien products and assure all, especially our fruit and vegetable growers, of our hearty co-operation in their endeavors to secure such adequate tariffs and pledge to them an opportunity to elect Republican congressmen from this state in 1928 who can and will procure the same.

4. Resolved, that in harmony with this time honored Republican policy of protection of American interests, we favor the re-election of President Coolidge, if he will accept, the election of four Republican congressmen and a Republican U. S. Senator from Florida in 1928 and pledge ourselves to the unalterable purpose to have a complete Republican state and county ticket nominated and elected in 1928.

5. Resolved, that we hail with delight the declaration of Gen. R. Skipper of August 25th, in which he opens the way for complete harmony of all Republicans of the state in a real Republican party for Florida, built from the voting precincts up and controlled by the Republican voters of the state; and we hereby extend to all Republicans in this county who have been heretofore aligned with the old organization a special and most cordial invitation to come into this the united Republican party of Florida and help us to victory at the polls in 1928.

6. Resolved, that we particularly denounce the special legislation policy of the Democratic party of Florida, as being not only a direct violation of the state constitution, striking as it does at the very foundation of government by the people, but also serves as a process by which the most vicious, corrupt, and despotic injustices are forced upon the citizenship. The last session of the state legislature is without a parallel in the history of the state for this unworthy impose upon the rights of the citizens of Florida, and a party that condones such outrages cannot escape the odium, and its organization alone must be held accountable for these impositions.

The county organization selected by the convention was:

P. A. Stroup, chairman of County Committee; I. E. Modglin, vice-chairman of County Committee; Mrs. O. L. Weatherby, secretary; C. B. Rusk, treasury.

County committeemen from the several precincts:

I. E. Modglin, T. F. Redwood, J. H. Weaver, John H. Degraw, C. H. Funk, W. E. Frank, J. A. Mizuick, O. L. Weatherby.

LEGION CALLS ON U. S MANHOOD TO COMBAT REDS

MARINETTE, Wis.—Rather than have the courts fit their procedure so as to least offend radicals, Ferre C. Watkins, Commander of the Illinois Department, American Legion, declared "it were better if need be for the manhood of America, embattled and fearless to stand in defense of American institutions with the unsheathed bayonet and the machine gun to protect them."

Radicalism, he asserted, in addressing the Wisconsin Legion here, has challenged those institutions and the Legion must be found firmly back of every movement to defend them.

"The world has been rudely awakened recently and America's self-complacency has disappeared. Radicalism, varying from the red flag to the Internationalistic slogan, has aligned itself with Sacco and Vanzetti. The bomb and dynamite has sought to take the place of the books of the law. The red flag has sought to replace the Stars and Stripes, and violence, intimidation and threats have sought to cow and conquer the courts and the processes of justice.

"The present radical crisis is a challenge to American institutions and those who believe in this government and must be met firmly and fearlessly by an awakened American public and its officials, if we are to continue under this government with any hope for its future"—National Tribune.

BLUEBERRY DEVELOPMENT

A Jacksonville company is developing six thousands acres of blueberries in ten acre tracts near Crestview in West Florida. Blueberries are proving to be a money crop and the farmers of West Florida are going in for berries on a large scale. The ten acre tracts of the Jacksonville company will be sold to northern prospects who will be brought down in special trains.

COHOTOA IS THE ONLY CHINAMAN EVER RETIRED FROM THE REGULAR U. S A.

FOUGHT WITH THE UNION FORCES DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND LATER ENTERED THE REGULAR ARMY WHERE HE SERVED 30 YEARS MORE

Edward Day Cohota, a full-blood Chinese, and the only Chinaman ever to be retired from the United States Army, is now 84 years of age and enjoying life, according to the National Tribune, through its correspondent, E. H. Klock, of Edgemont, South Dakota.

The career of Private Cohota, as narrated by the National Tribune's correspondent is indeed interesting.

He was a member of the battle of Mountain Sanitarium at Hot Springs, South Dakota, and has the distinction of being the only Chinaman to serve the Union forces during the civil war, says the Tribune, "and the only man of his nationality who was ever retired from the United States Regular Army."

Continuing, the story says Comrade Cohota, a refined and well-read, self-educated gentleman, is a congenial and pleasant man to meet.

His mind is keen and bright, and he takes a great interest in all topics of the day as a typical American citizen. He's almost a real Yankee.

Comrade Cohota was born at Soow Jow, 60 miles from Shanghai, China, December 27, 1843. He came away from China when he was four years and three months old, on a sailing vessel—a trading ship—and was on the sea for three years. He grew up with the family of Capt. Day, at Gloucester, Mass. They were kind to him, and gave him the "Edward Day" part of his name.

In February, 1864, he went to the war. He enlisted in Co. I, 22nd Mass. He was mustered out at the end of the war at New Bern, N. C., in 1865.

He returned to Gloucester and looked for work; but as no one seemed to want to hire a discharged soldier, he became angry and made up his mind to go to sea again. He was on his way to find a ship in which to sail when he ran upon a Sergeant at Boston whom he had known in the service. This Sergeant was recruiting men for the Regular Army to serve in Texas. So, in the Fall of 1866, he enlisted in the 15th U. S., and was soon en route to Texas. Everybody in Texas those days wore a couple of six shooters and a bowie knife.

Recruit Cohota was destined to stay in the service nearly 30 years in addition to his volunteer service. He was retired from Co. G., 8th Inf., on August 15, 1894, on private's pay of $26 per month. During his long term of service he had soldiered in Texas, New Mexico and South Dakota. He was in service along the Missouri River in Dakota Territory for eight years.

In 1898 he wanted to enlist again and help his adopted country whip Spain, but he couldn't go as his wife was sick and he had six little children to support, the oldest of whom was 12 and the youngest one being 9 months old.

Comrade Cohota married Annie Holsteen, a Norwegian girl, the ceremony having taken place at Fort Randall, in Dakota Territory. His wife died a number of years later at Fort Niobrara.

After she died he was nearly down and out financially and physically, and had a large family of children to support. He went into the restaurant business at Valentine, Nebr., to support his family. He made as good as a merchant and citizen as he had as a soldier.

He had two sons in the World War, one of whom went overseas. Ten years ago he came to Battle Mountain Sanitarium, National Home of Disabled Volunteer soldiers, entering on his volunteer enlistment and is well satisfied.

Comrade Cohota's retired pay got up to $45.75 per month, his retired pay for 30 years' service in the Army. All about him at the Home were soldiers from the Civil War who were getting much more pension money for their Civil War service than he received as his retired salary. So he wrote to the Adjutant and asked for a discharge from the Regular Army, and was thus taken off the retired pay roll. He applied for a pension under the existing laws, and was granted almost immediately a pension of $72 per month.

Comrade Cohota is a Christian gentleman, a member of the Masonic order, is interested in every charity movement about the sanitarium, is refined and cultured—in short, a real gentlemen. He loves the people with whom he lives, and they all love him. —E. H. Klock, Edgemont, S. Dak.
